STATE OF ARKANSAS
COUNTY OF PIKE

I, William H. Preston, do (hereby) further certify that I have made out from the original, ... two copies of Schedule No. 2 containing 2 pages each -- 4 pages.

WILLIAM H. PRESTON
Assistant Marshal

Transcribed from microfilm of the 1850 Federal Census, Pike County, Arkansas Slave Schedule by David L. Kelley, registered copyright (TX 3 104 935) June 5, 1991.

Records of the Antioch Church of Christ,
1833-1916, Delight,
Pike County, Arkansas

May the 7th, 1854.

Received Han, a colored man, by confession and baptism (an entry from church record).

Han

Han Mansfield, a colored man, was the slave of James C. Mansfield of Pike county, Arkansas. After the Civil War and freedom, he changed his name to John Sanders. The 1850 Pike County, Arkansas Slave Schedule indicates the one male slave (Han) owned by James C. Mansfield was age 23 (born 1827) and mulatto.

Slavery

Slavery existed in this territory out of which Arkansas was carved as far back as April 19, 1719, when M. deSereigny brought some 250 negroes to Louisiana. France and Spain both recognized the legality of slavery and the Louisiana Territory was under both flags at separate times.

In 1810 there were only 1,062 white people in the territory. By act of Congress approved March 2, 1819, a part of the Territory of Missouri was created into Arkansas Territory and the laws of Missouri concerning slavery were applied to the new Arkansas Territory.

PIKE COUNTY

This county is situated in the southwestern part of the state. It is bounded on the north by Montgomery County; on the east by Clark; on the south by Hempstead and Nevada, and on the west by Howard County. The area of the county is 601 square miles, drained by the Caddo and Little Missouri rivers and the Antoine Creek, which forms the greater part of the eastern boundary. In the north the surface is mountainous, but the soil in the valleys is fertile and well adapted to agriculture. The average elevation is 506 feet. The largest peach orchard and the only diamond mine in the United States are located in this county.

The county was created by the act of November 1, 1833, out of territory taken from the counties of Clark and Hempstead. It was named for Lieut. Zebulon M. Pike, who led an exploring expedition into the Southwest in the early part of the Nineteenth Century and discovered Pike's Peak, which bears his name. He afterward rose to the rank of brigadier general. The first county officers were: Washington Sorrels, judge; David S. Dickson, clerk; John Hughes, sheriff; and John M. Dickson, coroner. In the organic act it was provided that the temporary seat of justice should be at the house of Paschal C. Sorrels until such time as commissioners should be elected to locate a permanent county seat. Elijah Kelley, Rice Stringer and John Dickson were elected and they selected the site of the present Town of Murfreesboro. A log courthouse and a small frame building for a clerk's office was at once erected. In the spring of 1834 a post office called "Zebulon" was established there with Asa Thompson as postmaster.

Pike is divided into the following townships: Antoine, Brewer, Caney Fork, Clark, Eagle, Missouri, Mountain, Muddy Fork, Pike City, Saline, Self Creek, Thompson, White and Wolf Creek. The population of the county in 1920 was 12,397.

Among the pioneers who settled in this county prior to 1830 were: Henry and Oliver Brewer, Jeremiah and Joseph Davis, David Dickson, John Blocker, James and John Hughes, Elijah and William Kelley, Isaac and Jordan White.

Asa Thompson represented the county in the lower house of the first State Legislature.

There are no large towns in the county. Murfreesboro, the county seat, was incorporated on April 9, 1890, and in 1920 had 730 inhabitants. It has a bank, two weekly newspapers, a flour mill, electric light, waterworks, sawmills, general stores, etc. Glenwood, at the junction of the Memphis,

Dallas & Gulf and the Missouri Pacific railroads in the northeast corner, is the largest town. It is an important shipping point, has a bank, electric light, a weekly newspaper, a telephone exchange, large lumber interest, mercantile concerns and a population of 891. Delight, on the Pike City branch of the Missouri Pacific, is an incorporated banking town with a population of 391. It has electric light, a grist mill, several sawmills, a telephone exchange, general stores. Rosboro, on the Missouri Pacific four miles southeast of Glenwood, has a population of 412. Its principal industry is lumbering. Pike City, about ten miles northeast of Murfreesboro, is the terminus of a short branch of the Missouri Pacific system. It has a population of 229 and is a trading center for a considerable district. Kimberly, so named from the diamond mines, is a short distance south of Murfreesboro, and there are several villages scattered over the county.

MURFREE, BRICKELL Col. Hardy MURFREE married Sarah (Sally) BRICKELL, the daughter of Col. Matthias BRICKELL of Winton, NC, Feb. 17, 1780 in Hertford County, NC and later moved to Tenn. It is my understanding that Murfreesboro, Tenn. was named after this American Revolution hero. In later years the family moved to your city (Murfreesboro, AR) and (told) your city of Murfreesboro was also named in honor of this hero. I know that at least two BRICKELL'S fought with him in the great battle of Fort Stoney Point in N.Y. as well as other battles in Penn, etc. Carter R.
